Last Ekistics with J. Gottmann as Guest-Editor

EKISTICS / ΟΙΚΙΣΤΙΚΗ: The problems and science of HUMAN SETTLEMENTS
Volume 57, Number 340/341, January/Febuary - March/April 1990

Urban growth and politics

- 2 The anthropogeocentric model
Indicative presentation of themes emphasized in the current issue, in terms of scale, time, income group, interconnection of ekistic elements and desirability/feasibility.
- 3 The editor's preface
"New notions in planning that is not inherently profitless, but planning practice does not always reflect this — the relevance of the debate in this issue to ekistics and EKISTICS".
Jean Gottmann
- 4 Political problems of urban growth — The guest editor's introductory statement
"Much work remains to be done for a better grasp of the political role of cities and their 'networks'... whose extreme 'complexity appears fully in the political behavior they manifest' — a global overview of political problems due to urban growth 'from the historic past to the present trend to urban sprawl'... and the need for more research... are represented, with reference to chauvinistic ideas in Europe. As a and North America, Jean Gottmann
- 11 Administrative and political issues generated by the growth of Paris since 1800 — Jean Gottmann
Even at present... the new districts of the Suburb against the Capital, of the periphery against the center, goes on — the safety of political, administrative and financial problems, caused by the demographic, economic and spatial growth of the larger conurbation of centralised France, its capital city, from 1789 to present.
Jean Gottmann
- 16 Urban politics and the urbanization process: A case study in Palermo — Kelitchi Takeuchi
"The evolution of the economic, social and physical structure of the capital city of Sicily in the last five decades with in the framework of socio-economic and the prevailing 'patron-clientele' pattern of illegal organization and the ensuing parallel activities in both the private and the public sector".
Kelitchi Takeuchi
- 22 Three models for the future of an urban periphery
"The arguments in favor of a iterative pattern of 'integration', 'isolation' or 'separate co-existence' of the historic city in the lappe and the New development on the mainland and the differences between political parts, administrative authorities, economic institutions, and public opinion groups in these reflected in the results of the 1979 and '90 referenda".
Calogero Muscara
- 35 Central-Periphery and the urban crisis of Athens
Land speculation, the conquest of others by the rich... are the inability of the periphery to the capital only within a process of nation building which has been both rapid and brutal — the role of the strategic situation of national space and the Greek diaspora.
George Preveakis
- 44 The capital city development in Japan
"Will the capital city of the future integrate those urban and administrative functions as in the past, or will it be created in close liaison with the existing city as fully independent of its functions? — the importance of geographic, environmental and cultural factors, such as the location of the capital city and its resonance, in explaining why Japan is faced with the question of relocating its capital or, at least, transferring its major functions from Tokyo".
Etsushi Isomura
- 48 Japan: Towards a World Megalopolis and metamorphosis of international relations
"... without examining territorial political problems, we cannot understand the evolution of Japan's urban system and the growth and changes of its great metropolitan areas" — the restructuring of the Tokaido urban system towards a world megalopolis, "an indispensable core for world politics and economy".
Yasuo Miyakawa
- 76 The International Centre for the Study of East Asian Development in Kitakyushu — Etsushi Isomura
"Concerning the internationalization of the region, the exchange of information and experience, joint research, joint training and cooperative studies on jointly socio-economic aspects of current and future urbanization and on other issues of urban importance".
- 79 The Hong Kong new port and airport development strategy Lawrence Wai Chung Lai and Elvis Wai Kwong Au
"Under what economic conditions would our port and airport function best if existing government finance practice is maintained?" — an attempt to stimulate further positive empirical and analytical studies involving quantitative technical aspects, not for a broad overview, in business, academic, professional and public discussions.
Peter Woodstock
- 80 Spatial political processes in Canada — C. Charles Ross
Political processes are significant activating forces to attract them, they allow for the representation and re-arrangement of spatially-based interests and issues; evidence provided about the "development", "redistributive" and "allocational" but also "spatial conflicts and/or" political processes through the analysis of data from the cable television presentations by candidates through the 1989 municipal election campaign in the regional municipality of Waterloo and its cities — Cambridge, Kitchener and Waterloo — in Ontario.
- 95 City centers viewed from the periphery: Psychological factors affecting a city's development J.A. Lapouge
"... emerging psychological factors in the shape of our perception of the city, hence is shaping the city itself" — the example offered by the change in the perception of Moscow's city center by the citizens of the peripheral peripheries during the political, social and cultural changes of the 1960s and 1970s — a period commonly called the 'Qatay Revolution'.
J.A. Lapouge
- 99 The world relations of cities: Closing the gap between social science paradigms and everyday human experience — Chawick F. Alger
"... emerging interdisciplinary networks of scholars who are attempting to understand... the changing global context of cities and the growing and changing responses of people to these changes... will provide a significant new dimension to the future world polity".
Chawick F. Alger
